

President's Comments

Wow! It is already approaching the end of the first quarter of 2024. We are fast approaching the time to elect a new board for our chapter. Help us to invigorate our members and determine the future course for our chapter. The President's message from the National President Jim Thornton talked about the new strategic plan for the society which incorporates 5 values: Community, Leadership, Excellence, Accountability, and Respect. These values form the acronym CLEAR and as safety professionals we should all embodied these values as we navigate through the challenges of our daily lives.

As members and volunteer leaders we are the face of ASSP. Help me to create a sense of community within our chapter and strengthen our network to provide the tools and training that is needed for our members to protect people, property, and the environment. This is our calling.

If you are willing to step up, I invite you to help pursue our mission!

Your President,

Lori Elder, CSP

It is 2024 and the time to think about your future.

- How to advance your Safety Career?
- What is your next step in professional development?

One step to consider is earning a recognized Safety Certification and three ways that safety certifications will benefit your career:

1. Potential for Higher Salaries: a salary survey in 2020. Found, full-time safety professionals with at least one of the 12 certifications could earn approximately $20,000 more per year than those with none.
2. Job Mobility: certifications also put you in a stronger position if you're considering moving up in your organization or finding a job elsewhere. If you're up against safety professionals with similar education and experience, your certifications may be a tiebreaker.
3. Knowledge of Trends and Industry Best Practices: Maintaining a certification often requires continuing education. You'll be better prepared for additional responsibilities since you'll be studying the latest trends, standards, regulations, best practices and laws regarding safety and health in the workplace.

Join us in a review of the Professional Designation/Certifications available to you. We will give you a preview of the journey. With this knowledge you can reduce the fear of the process

Help ASSP Develop Safety Standards

Representatives on ASSP standards committees attend meetings for their assigned standard; review written proposals to evolve that standard; and vote on that standard's final approval. They also report back to our Standards Development Committee — keeping those volunteer leaders apprised of significant developments. As a standards committee representative, you can develop yourself professionally by sharing your knowledge in various ways:

- Write about your assigned standard for ASSP publications.
- Deliver a presentation about your standard at the annual professional development conference.
- Network with other industry experts who serve on your committee.
- Consult with other safety professionals who have questions about the standards.
